

Kanine Korner

By Francis X. Lohmann

A dog is unquestionably man's best friend . . . companion of his solitude, advanced guard in the hunt and an ally of the trenches.

I think this is a most appropriate lead in to a heartwarming story of man's first meeting with the noble and faithful dog. A story almost lost in the myriad of forgotten centuries. Perhaps a legend but a beautiful one to be sure.

When the intellectual gap began to spread, man stood on one side and the rest of the animals on the opposite side. The man looked upward at the sky, and all the other animals walked off, couldn't possibly make it; I lifted the dog firmly and placed him by his side where he has been ever since.

"Oh, let him try it" sneered the cat. "he'll break his silly neck." But the dog heard none of them. His eyes were on the man and he danced on the very edge of the gap and yelped and yelped and yelped. And the man heard him and looked across and for the first time saw the beautiful dog in a brand new prospective.

"COME," shouted the man. "I'm coming," yelped the dog. The dog braced himself and made that historic leap. But the gap by now was quite far apart; almost too far apart for a little doggie and only his paws struck the further edge of the chasm and there he hung without so much as a whimper looking straight into the eyes of man. And then there came to the man a strange feeling. A feeling he had never experienced before and he smiled and stooped and

I like Lou Russo's and Jerry Dwyer's grim reminder: "Our country isn't going to the dogs. It's going to the kids." How about that? In Goeppingen, West Germany, a 47-year old woman who forgot that British cars have steering wheels on the right side crashed her auto into a wall because she was shocked at seeing a dog in what she thought was the driver's seat of an oncoming car, police said.

RECOMMENDED for your doggie library: "Great Show Dogs of America," a dog lover's feast of photographs and facts. This magnificent bow wow volume spotlights the leading Best in Show dogs and winners in sporting, hound, working, terrier, toy and non-sporting breeds — and documented facts and data about them — during the past 10 years.

This lifetime collector's item, handsomely and durably bound in royal blue and gold printed cloth, is available at better bookstalls and pet shops around Southern California or direct from the publisher, Howell Book House, 845 Third Ave., New York City, N.Y. 10022. Its priced at $15, really a small entry fee for the greatest dog show ever assembled.

outside and our dogs would enter the pearly gates.

BREED OF THE WEEK — Kerry Blue Terrier . . . The Kerry Blue Terrier has been known in Ireland for about 125 years, but he is comparatively a newcomer to America for he was not shown in this country until 1922 and 1924 marked his acceptance by the American Kennel Club.

The breed's name comes from old County Kerry, famous for its eye-catching mountains and lakes. Here the Kerry found himself in the position of Jack of all trades, being used as a herd dog for cattle, sheep and hogs, a hunter of vermin, and a retriever on both land and water.

THE KERRY was not considered a show dog until he was chosen as the national dog of the Irish Republic and interested fanciers who thought that properly trimmed and groomed, the raggle-taggle terriers would be smart looking show dogs. The Kerry has many distinct advantages as a housedog, being personable, alert and mentally keen and an ideal guard for children. His coat never sheds which should endear him to the meticulous housekeeper. His completely distinctive coloration and stylish outline give him the individuality that causes his admirers to describe the Kerry as the "Terrier that is different." The Kerry tips the scales at about 35 pounds and in height 18 inches. The Kerry Blue Terrier Club of Southern California is a most active organization in spreading the fame of the breed on the West Coast. That's 30 barks for now. Be columning you next week.
